Lending Officer Johnny Smith Joins Pacific Crest Savings Bank

Lynnwood, Wash.—Pacific Crest Savings Bank is pleased to announce that Johnny Smith has joined the Lynnwood community bank as a vice president and residential loan officer. Smith brings more than 30 years of lending and title insurance expertise to the role, and most recently served as a senior account manager for Fidelity National Title.

“Johnny’s Pacific Northwest roots and decades-long experience in the residential real estate business offer a valuable combination that will serve our clients and community well,” said Sheryl Nilson, CEO of Pacific Crest Savings Bank.

As a new vice president and residential loan officer at Pacific Crest, Smith will work with clients to provide portfolio loans for residential properties and floating homes.

Prior to joining Pacific Crest, Smith worked extensively in title insurance, spending 22 years in the industry and serving in a range of roles for prominent organizations – many of which were acquired by Fidelity National Title. He began his career on the lending side working with Cascade Savings and Loan, where he honed his knack for client service.

“Communication, experience and knowledge – that’s what I bring to every interaction with clients who can count on me to deliver what they need,” Smith said. “I was drawn to Pacific Crest’s philosophy of community banking and I’m looking forward to the opportunity to offer flexible programs and local underwriting to clients who make western Washington home.”

Smith grew up in Everett and attended Western Washington University on a track and field athletic scholarship. For many years he volunteered with local high school and collegiate athletic groups, and he enjoys spending time outdoors with his wife, children and grandkids.
